The effects of partial replacement of oleic acid by linoleic acid on the fatty acid composition of total lipids and the milk fat content have been investigated in three groups of cows, with the average fat contents of the three groups being 7.4, 8.0 and 8.3%, respectively. The results showed that the linoleic acid content and the ratios of unsaturated to saturated fatty acids in the total lipids, and that in the milk fat were higher in the linoleic acid-supplemented group than in the oleic acid-supplemented group. The increase in the linoleic acid content in the total lipids was accompanied by a decrease in the stearic acid content, and a change in the ratio of stearic acid to oleic acid. In contrast, the decrease in the stearic acid content was associated with the increase in the oleic acid content in the milk fat. In particular, the unsaturated to saturated fatty acid ratios in the total lipids and the milk fat were shifted from 10.0 to 9.8 and from 1.9 to 2.1, respectively, for the three groups of cows. It is concluded that the replacement of oleic acid by linoleic acid may have implications for the biosynthesis of milk lipids.
