A: EDIT: Had a couple of things wrong in the HTML, fixed it, but it's back to the top as a result. You need to give your post some kind of unique identifier so the browser doesn't just reload it every time. For that you need to add a tag. Then you need to add a "page title" tag with your keywords in it. Finally, if you want search engines to find your post then you need to add a tag. I added the meta tags to this post, if you go back to the top and refresh the page it should search the page for your keywords. If you want to test it out, here's the URL: Your meta tags should look something like this: Your Title You need to specify the keywords and description in your tag. Your Title "Rock star" Bill Gates has come out in support of the election of controversial former President Daniel Ortega, whom he has backed for years, describing Ortega as a strong leader and saying that he remains the best hope for Nicaragua. Gates was a frequent visitor to Nicaragua when Ortega led the Sandinista Revolution, and was seen as one of the main pillars of the FSLN in Washington. With the opposition boycotting early elections for which Ortega is currently the favourite, Gates has offered a tip of the hat to his support for Ortega. "As the Sandinistas face a constitutional crisis and are boycotting elections, I'd like to put on record my support for President Ortega. For 2d92ce491b
