In the third quarter of 2019, phone activity in the United States increased 7.3%, to $472 billion. That's up from $426 billion a year earlier, according to data from the financial research firm Bank of America Merrill Lynch. The surge in phone usage is likely a byproduct of Americans' new reliance on smartphones to manage everyday tasks. More Americans are also using their phones to make payments. The number of U.S. consumers who made at least one payment through a mobile app or device hit 21 million in the third quarter of 2019, up from 18.5 million a year earlier. Millennials are leading the charge, Bank of America's head of global payments, Linda Piu, told CNN Business in an interview. They are "using their smartphones to send and receive payments for everyday transactions and using those mobile phone apps, like Venmo, to make payments," Piu said. He was born in Le Havre, France and died in Paris. He discovered a new type of compound refraction, which he named stratified dispersion. He is also known for the Fresnel lens. Biography Augustin Fresnel was born on September 14, 1788, in Le Havre, France. He was one of the thirteen children born to Francis Amédée Fresnel, a Le Havre clockmaker, and Aglaé Hocquet. He was born the younger of two sons; his brother Louis-Amédée was born two years later. The Fresnel family was Protestant and Augustin was schooled privately in the catechism, not to satisfy any religious compulsions, but because his father would have preferred to send his sons to the cathedral school.
