Totally obsessed with hand knitting and dyeing yarn, I've decided to try my hand at another craft - crochet! I'm beginning with a simple houndstooth pattern that I saw in an old issue of McCall's. I may do more, depending on my mood and my inspiration. This is not a blog. This is just a journal to keep myself updated as to what I am doing in my personal life. Friday, September 9, 2012 Not enough time for blog posting. I am currently working on the following projects: knitting some socks, doing a doll tutorial, dyeing a small piece of dyed cotton yarn, and crocheting a crochet doily. No, I'm not going to show you a picture of my sock. I'm not quite finished, and I don't want to get my hopes up. It's too easy to finish and be disappointed! In the past, portable radio communication devices such as cellular telephones or the like have been provided with a circuit to ensure that an incoming call is not erroneously answered by a person who is not the intended party. Such a circuit is generally known as a "call back circuit". An example of a call back circuit is shown in FIG. 1 of the drawings. The circuit comprises a battery-operated radio communication device 10 and an incoming call receiver 12. A relay circuit 14 interposed between the incoming call receiver 12 and a call receiving circuit 16 is also battery-operated. The relay circuit 14 is powered by the battery of the communication device 10. It is arranged that when an incoming call is received at the incoming call receiver 12, the relay circuit 14 is activated and conducts a signal from the incoming call receiver 12 to the call receiving circuit 16, via a DC-DC converter 18. The relay circuit 14 is arranged to return to its original condition after the call is completed. The circuit works so that the battery of the communication device 10 is not consumed when the call is answered by a call back service. However, in the known circuit arrangement, the relay circuit 14 is coupled with the DC-DC converter 18 so as to enable the battery to Multiple testing modes The application has been designed with support for multiple knowledge testing modes and allows you to choose the one you consider best suited to your needs directly from its main window. The tool offers you access to a learning mode, which should help you expand your SharePoint Server 2013 knowledge, complemented by a practice mode and rapid review and assessment test modes for verifying what you have learned. Verify your answers in real time When in learning mode, you can check whether you have provided the correct answers to the exam questions in real-time. For that, you only need to press the "Show Answer" button to check whether you delivered the correct one. The tool provides you with the possibility to customize the manner in which questions are built and also allows you to input keywords so that only items that include them would be displayed. Take random or preset exams While the Learning mode is an excellent tool for improving your knowledge, the Practice Mode allows you to make a better idea of whether you are ready to take the Microsoft 70-332 exam or not. It enables you to take random or preset tests to get ready for the actual exam. At the end of each exam, the software displays info on your score, on the number of questions and answers, and on your accuracy. You can also access the Exam History to view info on the results for all of the tests you have taken. A fast, intuitive application All in all, Self Test Training - Microsoft 70-332 is an easy-to-use, snappy program for all of you interested in learning more on SharePoint Server 2013 and on testing your knowledge. It does not offer certification, but it includes multiple operation modes to intensively prepare for the actual exam.
