Acetabular fractures often are associated with posterior wall and posterior column or transverse fractures. Long-leg fractures associated with posterior wall and posterior column or transverse fractures are often treated by performing a locking plate for osteosynthesis. However, those who are old and fragile may not be able to bear such a long operation. Acetabular fractures with bone loss and comminution can be dealt with by open reduction and internal fixation by using an intramedullary nail. In this report, we describe the surgical outcomes of 2 elderly women with the complex acetabular fractures who were treated with an intramedullary nail. We had an excellent outcome in 1 case; however, the other case had a complication of infection in the early postoperative period. During the second debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump, moderators Chris Wallace and Martha Raddatz asked the candidates to discuss which candidate will support and enforce recent court decisions on gay marriage, abortion, and religious liberty. It is well known that Clinton is a committed liberal who has even been quoted as saying she will support any court decisions that go against the LGBT community. It is also true that Trump is a committed conservative, whose stated positions on these topics have been to uphold traditional American values. However, it is really Clinton who has become increasingly hostile to Christianity and Christian values over the years. Even some atheists like Robert Stark are shocked to hear that Clinton states she personally hates Christians and Christianity and will fight against them. With all this in mind, it is important to remind everyone that Clinton is not the only candidate in this election. Moreover, just because a candidate happens to be a Christian does not mean that she will not support Christian values, and if she does support them, she will certainly do so out of the great love of God and not because she is forced to. In the final part of this series, we will examine how a Christian can do his part to promote conservative values in the United States.
